

My artistic style deconstructs the lace patterns that is woven in to undergarments and fuese them onto the backdrop of a scenic mountain.The style I've created reflects my desire to expose my true ego which desires to lose control; enabling me to create my ideal imagery.

My work focuses primarily on scenery; however, the images of the actual scenes are not fully exposed on the canvas. I do not simply draw formative features but rather intuitively recreate them. I reinterpret a chosen scene and channel it through my own emotions; only then can I express my artistic vision. It takes many revisions to finally expose the imagery of the mountains as how I perceive them from my inmost emotions. Even if I continually redraw the same mountain, my art produces different outcomes in relation to the temporal and spatial changes of the mountain itself. My artwork is complete with drawn backlight, which helps define the final creation.
