Dot – city lights

Artist note

The various lights of the city continue to flicker and flame in the dark. They seem to know their fate of fading in the dawning of the day, and how effervescent and unstable they are as a result. The nights were meant to be periods of rest in which all light receded and only human breathing was heard.

But the chaotic floods of artificial lights invented by humans continue to light irrepressible human desires.

The nightly scenes of artificial lights invented by humans continue to light irrepressible human desires.

The nightly scenes of racing cars, massive buildings, and artificial lighting works are deconstructed into points and recreated into another world, imbued with my own sensibility and hope. Each point of the urban scene characterized by the loss of natural innocence and the unbridled human desires is re-born into a point of warmth. These points are mixed together to give forms to the aspiration for a more harmonious world.

We forget the strife and struggles of the day at night, relieving ourselves of our daily burdens at least for the time being. I want to give viewers love and happiness through my nightscape.
